Writing is an essential skill for anyone at any stage of life and in any context. Strong writing skills don’t just benefit students: they’re also a critical component of a strong workforce. Yet, so many individuals are not taught to write well—not as students, not as professionals in the workplace—and this is especially true for those in underfunded and underserved communities. Less explicitly talked about are the cognitive and emotional benefits of writing; it is a tool for critical thinking, self-growth, and social & emotional processing. These are among the reasons why we need to talk about writing education. We surveyed hundreds of teachers to understand the current state of writing education from their perspective.

They graded the writing education system a D-. Read on to learn why.

ABOUT 826

826 is the largest youth writing network in the country. It was founded in 2002 in San Francisco by educator Ninive Calegari and author Dave Eggers. 826 National serves as the hub of the movement to amplify student voices and champions the belief that strong writing skills are essential for academic and lifelong success. The 826 Network now serves more than 450,000 students ages 6 to 18 in under-resourced communities each year online via 826 Digital and through chapters in nine cities: Boston, Chicago, Detroit/Ann Arbor/Ypsilanti, Los Angeles, New Orleans, New York City, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and Minneapolis/St. Paul. We work toward a country in which the power and the joy of writing is accessible to every student in every classroom. Together, we believe writing is the key to cultivating a new generation of creative and diverse thinkers who will define a better, brighter, and more compassionate future.
